

SENATE TO WATCH ALL EXPENDITURES

Senator Elsner Member of Committee that Must Pass on All Bills Incurred by That Body.

ACTIVE IN THE UPPER HOUSE

Representative Branaman Appointed Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Jackson county's representatives in the Indiana state legislature are prominent in the activities of that body and have been appointed to the most important committees. Senator Edward P. Elsner is recognized as one of the leaders in the upper branch of the legislature and it is agreed that he shall be appointed chairman of the corporation committee. He is also a member of Judiciary A, the committee to which the majority of the bills introduced are referred.

Another important committee of which Senator Elsner is a member is the "plunder" or expense committee. The other two members of that committee are Senators Kolsem and Fleming and they have complete charge of all expenditures for the senate. To this committee is left the duty of employing clerks and doorkeepers and other employees of the senate. All expenditures must be verified by the committee.

Senator Elsner spent Sunday with his family in this city and before he returned to Indianapolis this morning he declared that the committee on expenses had decided to keep the cost of the senate down to a minimum figure. "We have employed only fifteen doorkeepers this session while at the last session there were about forty. In every possible way the expenses will be kept down."

Senator Elsner said that practically no legislation had been decided upon as yet, but that the majority members would hold caucuses this week when the program would be outlined in a general way. He believed that there would be a strong and united opposition to the proposed repeal to the Three-Mile gravel law. He said he did not know what action would be taken regarding the request of the railroads to increase the passenger tariffs.

Over in the house of representatives John Branaman, of Brownstown, is a leader and will have a place on several of the most important committees. Branaman was a candidate for speaker of the house and made a strenuous fight until the last moment. He then withdrew from the race and threw his support to Charles H. Bedwell, the successful candidate who was given the support of the Governor. It is understood that Branaman did not withdraw from the race until he was assured that Bedwell would be elected and until he was promised the chairmanship of the ways and means committee. The appointments will not be announced until this afternoon. Branaman will have a place on other committees.

This is Senator Elsner's second term in the upper house and Branaman is serving his third term. As both are acquainted with the procedure of the legislature and know how to "land" places they have the advantage over the younger members and are also profiting by their experience.

Two other Jackson county democrats are seen around the legislative halls in official capacities. Marion A. Weddell has been appointed assistant door-keeper of the senate and has his own desk in the small room adjoining the senate chamber. Under the rules adopted by this session either the chief door-keeper or his assistant must be on duty at the entrance throughout the day. Weddell also checks in the employees when they arrive in the morning. The chief door-keeper draws $6 a day and his assistant is paid $5 per day.

Tilford Owens, of Medora, has been appointed assistant door-keeper in the lower house upon the recommendation of Representative Branaman. He will probably remain on duty for thirty days.

It is desired that a large representation of the former Indiana students be present at the meeting here Friday night.

WHEAT CONTINUES TO CLIMB UPWARD

Local Mills Paying $1.28 a Bushel Which is the Highest Price For Many Years.

EXPORTATION CAUSES JUMP

Estimated That Farmers Hold 35 Per Cent. of Crop Grown in This County Last Year.

Break in Wheat.

Following the steady advance in the wheat market the last few days a break occurred in the Chicago market this afternoon when the price declined three and one-half cents. It was announced that the local price would remain $1.28 until the new level is reached. In case of a further drop in price tomorrow the local market will be lower.

According to the best obtainable figures about thirty-five per cent. of the wheat crop in Jackson last is being held by the farmers who hope to get the benefit of the steadily increasing price. Wagon wheat at the local mills and elevators today in being quoted at $1.28 per bushel, the highest price for many years. During the last few days the price has advanced steadily because of the heavy exportation of grain from United States ports.

During the last seven years the highest price, with the exception of the present quotation, was $1.25 per bushel in 1909 when Patton sent wheat sky high. During that year the quotation in Chicago for a short time was $1.60. Local wheat prices for the last few years are as follows:

1914, 95 cents; 1913, $1.05; 1902, $1.05; 1911, $1.15; 1910, $1; 1909, $1.25.

Whether or not the price will continue to soar depends entirely upon the demand from the European countries. A few days ago the price was advanced when it was reported that the South American countries were unable to secure ships to transport grain from those countries. This meant that a number of the European countries would depend almost entirely upon this country for their grain supplies and bidding in the stock exchanges became lively. As long as the dealers abroad continue to pay the high prices the quotations will continue to advance.

It is not believed that the price will be much lower until the new crop is marketed next summer, but it is a gamble to know how much higher it will go. Many farmers in this county are holding their grain on their farms or in the local elevators awaiting the top price. With wheat selling at $1.28 many of them are not risking the chances of a drop and are selling while others believe the price will reach $1.50 before the first of March and are holding out for that price.

Because of the material advance in the price of wheat soon after the harvest last summer and the prospects that the export trade will be heavy next year a larger acreage of wheat was sown last fall than the year previous. There is no method by which the exact acreage can be computed but it is thought from the

RAIL OFFICIALS SEEK CONFERENCE

Representatives of Passenger Departments will Meet Business Men Here Thursday.

ASK REPEAL OF 2-CENT RATE

Bill will be Introduced in Legislature to Provide Higher Passenger Rate in State.

General passenger agents of the three railroads operating through this city have requested a conference with the members of the Seymour Commercial Club to afford them an opportunity to hear the reasons why the railroads are asking for the repeal of the two-cent rate law by present session of the Indiana legislature. Similar meetings have been held in a number of other cities in the state and it was expected that one would be arranged here in the near future.

The general and division passenger agents of the B. & O. Southwestern, Pennsylvania and Southeastern Line together with the representatives of other roads will be present and present the companies' arguments. Edward Massman, local agent of the B. & O. Southwestern Railroad, has been instructed by the passenger department to arrange for the meeting at the assembly room at the B. & O. division offices and it will be called at 9:30 o'clock. Clark B. Davis, secretary of the Seymour Commercial Club, and Harry M. Miller, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, have been notified of the conference and have been requested to urge the members of the two organizations to be present. A general invitation to the public is also extended.

The railroads operating in this state are organized and are prepared to go before the legislature and seek the repeal of the two-cent rate law and have a two and one-half cent law enacted. Upon the part of the traveling public there is, of course, strong opposition to the repeal of the law and the purpose of the meetings such as will be held here Thursday is to show why the railroads are asking for the increase passenger tariff. Some time ago the railroads were given an increase in interstate traffic and afterwards the five per cent. advance in freight rates on the roads in the Eastern Association was approved.

The railroad companies contend that the passenger business is a losing proposition under the two-cent fare and that they are entitled to a sufficient rate so they can make a reasonable profit from the passenger department. The local agents have been requested to bring the date of the conferences to the attention of the business men of this city so a representative number will be present.

Fortnightly Club.

Called meeting Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the home of Mrs. L. B. Hill, West Second street. All members urged to be present. Business of importance.

VIOLENT FIGHTING ALONG THE LYS AND OISE RIVERS

French Claim to Have Taken German Trenches With Heavy Loss to the Enemy.

Paris, January 11.—There is violent fighting along the entire line between the Lys and the Oise. In a series of combats the French have taken a line of German trenches here, according to this afternoon's official announcement. From the sea to the Lys the fighting continues to be artillery exchanges.

The heavy fighting near Soissons continues, the Germans constantly sacrificing men trying to regain the ground they relinquished last week. The fighting is increasing in volume but the French war office emphatically denies the Germans claims of gains at this point. It is asserted that the Allied lines are being inserted in the trenches heretofore held by the Germans.

CONSTANTINOPLE IS IN DANGER OF BEING TAKEN

Allied Fleet May Force Passage Between Fords and Fear of Massacre is Expressed.

Rome, January 11.—Advices from Constantinople indicate that the bombardment by the Allied fleet of the Dardaniels fort has already damaged some of the outer forts. The fear is growing that the fleet may force a passage and may capture Constantinople. Grave fears have been expressed by the officials that a massacre would be hard to prevent if that happens.

DUNKIRK BOMBARDED BY HOSTILE AIRCRAFT AGAIN

German Aviator Attempts to Fly Over French Position and is Brought to Earth.

GREAT BRITAIN MAKES ANSWER

American Protest Is Given Consideration.

QUITE FRANK AND FRIENDLY

British Foreign Minister's Reply to the Objections Raised Over Here to Naval Interference With the Neutral Trade of This Country Seeks to Support British Exercise of Its Control of the Seas.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Examination of the document shows the reply of Great Britain to the protest of the United States against British practices in interfering with the neutral trade of this country, in tone is even more friendly and in spirit quite as frank as the American note. It is in most respects a convincing argument in support of the British exercise of its control of the seas and seeks with considerable success to refute some of the contentions set forth in the American protest.

Aside from the protest against the methods rather than the principle of the British policy with regard to stopping contraband destined for the enemy's country, it was considered here that the strongest point in the American note was the contention that England had violated her own and accepted rule in her treatment of foodstuffs as absolute contraband when consigned to neutral countries adjoining Germany. The British reply to this contention probably is the weakest point in the argument of his majesty's government. While it is maintained that Great Britain has adhered to the accepted rule, and while it is declared that it is her present intention to do so, an excuse for departure from the rule in future is sought in the allegation that her enemies are violating the accepted rules of civilization and humanity.

No Intention to Offend.

In general the British reply presents little that was not anticipated here by those familiar with the respective views of the two parties to the controversy. As was expected, Great Britain gives every assurance that could be desired of conducting her operations with the least possible harm to the interests of the United States and those of neutral trade in general and borrowing the very language of the American note with regard to trade interference, asserts that only such interference "as is necessary to protect the belligerents' national safety, and then only to the extent to which this is necessary" is warranted or intended by Great Britain. It is explained that this note is a preliminary communication "to remove some misconceptions that seem to exist" and will be followed by one dealing in more detail with the issues raised.

Taking up the American contention that British practices have caused depression in American trade by denying American products their long established markets in the neutral countries of Europe, the British cite the American export figures for November, 1913 and 1914. Great Britain concedes that cotton may have fallen off, but points out that she cannot be blamed for that, as she has at all times declared and practiced the intention of not interfering with cotton as contraband.

Situation Regarding Copper.

Replying to American contentions regarding copper, Great Britain shows from American figures how tremendously the imports of copper by the neutral countries contiguous to Germany and Austria have increased since the war. "With such figures," the note declares, "the presumption is very strong that the bulk of copper consigned by these countries has recently been intended not for their own use, but for that of a belligerent who cannot import it direct."

"I cannot believe," says Sir Edward Grey, "that with such figures before them and in such cases as those just mentioned, the government of the United States would question the propriety of his majesty's government in taking suspected cargoes to a prize court."

This statement by the British foreign minister is regarded as a reference to the fact that the pressure of private business interests upon the state department is understood to have been partly responsible for the American note. The British claim to know that the administration had been approached through every possible channel in the interests of certain business affected by British policy.

FINAL ADJUSTMENT OF NACO SITUATION

Villa and General Scott Reach Agreement.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 11.—After his conference here with General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the United States army, General Francisco Villa has left for southern Mexico and General Scott has left for Naco, Ariz., to supervise the transfer of the Carranza garrison from Naco to Agua Prieta. According to the agreement between Generals Scott and Villa, the United States will permit the Carranza garrison at Naco to transfer by train, a distance of twenty-nine miles through the United States from Naco to Agua Prieta. This completed, General Scott will probably order most of the 5,000 United States troops now at Naco, to El Paso for the rest of the winter.

Naco, Sonora, will be administered by Carranza officials, but no troops are to be congregated there by either side. Nogales, Sonora, is to remain the Villa port of entry and Agua Prieta remains the Carranza port of entry. This gives Villa control of the southern Pacific railway south from Nogales to Hermosilla to Guaymas. Holding Agua Prieta gives Carranza control of the Phelps-Dodge railroad leading south from Douglas, Arizona, to Naco, Sonora, headquarters of one of the big mining properties of the Phelps-Dodge folks. Maytorena, Villa's lieutenant in Sonora, retains Cananea, but Carranza will hold the custom house at Naco, where the railroad leaves the United States. However, Villa and Maytorena control a line running parallel with the border from Nogales to Cananea, and even if they cannot keep this in operation, by the terms of the agreement reached by General Scott, General Villa and the Carranza officials, Naco is to be a neutral port and Villa and Maytorena, it is said, would have a right to import foods or ammunition through if they wanted to. To enforce the neutrality of the port, General Scott will leave a regiment of cavalry at Naco for a time, and perhaps a battery of artillery.

DEADLY QUARREL AT MINE

Delp leaves a widow and seven children. Thomas has a wife and one child.

A GREAT BATTLE NOW IMMINENT

Huge Armies Face Each Other North of Warsaw.

FIGHTING EXPECTED ANY TIME

Recent Rapid Movement of Troops Has Brought Rival Armies in Poland Up to a Million Men Each—In Flanders the Germans Are Renewing the Offensive, Seeking to Regain Positions Recently Lost to the Allies.

London, Jan. 11.—A new German offensive is noted by the latest report of the French war office, directed at the positions captured during the past few days by the allies and evidently designed to check the aggressive tactics instituted by General Joffre. The French statement says that they have held their ground everywhere.

Reports from Petrograd say that a rapid movement of troops during the past forty-eight hours has brought the armies preparing for the battle north of Warsaw up to a million men each. The fighting is expected to open at any time. Along the Bzura-Ravka frontier the Germans continue to attack. The Russians are making rapid progress across the Hungarian plains.

The German war office announces that French attempts to recapture Burnhaupt-Le-Haut in Alsace have failed. French attacks in Flanders, near Soissons, at Perthes and Alsace are reported to have been checked. German advances in the Argonne are described.

Roumania continues her warlike preparations, according to a dispatch from Bucharest. The government is enrolling many surgeons, is buying quantities of war munitions and is constructing hospitals which are supposed to be for military uses.

A Lull in Southern Poland.

In southern Poland and on the Cracow front there has been a cessation of all but artillery fighting and minor infantry actions. In addition to the battle north of Warsaw there are strong indications that the action near Cracow is developing again into a violent engagement.

The Russian army which marched through Borjo Pass in the southern Carpathians into the Transylvania plains has not met with any opposition worthy of the name as yet, but is making rapid progress northward to effect a junction with the invading armies which struck through the mountain range at Dulka and Uzsook passes. These forces, once joined, will possess a numerical strength greater than that of the Russian detachments which earlier in the war penetrated to some distance into Hungary, but were compelled to retreat as soon as they encountered real resistance. The present invasion is understood to have been planned for some time and to have been so carefully arranged that the Austrians will be obliged to assemble a force of half a million men if they expect to check it. At present the Russians have the advantage of initiative and are giving the enemy no chance to rest and recuperate his strength.

READY TO TALK OF PEACE

Significant Report Concerning Emperor Francis Joseph.

In speaking of an honorable and long-lasting peace, compensating for present sacrifices, he said that his efforts are being directed to ending the war at the earliest moment possible.

Paris, Jan. 11.—A dozen German aeroplanes bombarded Dunkirk and surrounding district on Sunday. Dunkirk is the headquarters of the English division of the allied armies.

LABOR DEPARTMENT'S LATEST UNDERTAKING

Will Try to Relieve Unemployment Situation.

Washington, Jan. 11.—It has just been announced that the department of labor has inaugurated an extension of the work heretofore conducted by it in finding jobs for aliens and immigrants and will in the future attempt to aid all unemployed to obtain work. Up to the present time the department, through the immigration service, conducted a division whose aim it has been to place on farms aliens and immigrants, and the work of this division has been measurably successful. The suggestion made by President Wilson in his Indianapolis speech advocating systematic efforts to help workmen to employment renewed the interest of the department in the matter and the most active efforts will be, it is said, to see what can be done to relieve the unemployment situation that exists generally throughout the country.

NOW UNDER CONSIDERATION

Has a Priest the Right to Visit Houses Under Quarantine?

Columbus, Ind., Jan. 11.—Harry Truitt, sanitary officer here, took into custody the Rev. J. B. Delaney, priest in charge of St. Bartholomew's Catholic church here, for violating diphtheria quarantines by visiting homes in which there were cases of diphtheria. The priest is said to have told the officer that he had as much right to visit homes in which there were contagious diseases as had the physicians. He was released and the sanitary officer referred the case to the prosecuting attorney, who has it under consideration.

A COLORADO JAIL GUARDED

Authorities Feared an Attack by Union Miners.

Denver, Jan. 11.—Fearing attack by union miners on the Huerfano county jail at Walsenburg, following the withdrawal of United States troops, Sheriff Jeff Farr sent an urgent call for aid to Governor Ammons. A company of militia, seventy strong, was immediately placed on guard around the jail. Fifteen strikers are in the jail charged with murder, conspiracy and other crimes, as the result of mine battles last spring.

Holds Pardon Record.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 11.—Full pardons to about 1,500 persons convicted in South Carolina of various crimes, and paroled since Jan. 1, 1911, have just been granted by Governor Bleas. The governor accepted as correct the estimate of his office attaches that his actions would increase to 3,165 the total number of pardons, paroles and commutations of sentence which he has granted since he became governor four years ago. He will retire from office on Jan. 19.

Old Flagman Uses Gun.

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 11.—Thomas D. Crowe, seventy-five years old, a flagman for the Illinois Central railroad, shot and perhaps fatally wounded Archer Nelson, twenty-five years old, a miner. Nelson is said to have been drinking and attempted to force his way into the flagman's shanty.

Joffre Sticks to Business.

Paris, Jan. 11.—An officer who is attached to the staff of General Joffre states that the French commander has not read a single newspaper since the beginning of the war, that he does not smoke or drink and writes no letters except brief notes to his wife and his sister.

Motorcycle Ran Into Train.

Logansport, Ind., Jan. 11.—Fred Betchter, twenty-three years old, was instantly killed when he drove his motorcycle into a train at a crossing east of this city. Victor Toby, who was riding in a side car, was seriously injured.

COMMITTEE ASSIGNMENTS

Made in the Legislature This Afternoon.

TO COMPLETE ORGANIZATION

Both Houses of the General Assembly Reconvened This Afternoon With the Expectation That Presiding Officers Would Hand Down Their Committee Appointments and Get Things in Running Order.

Indianapolis, Jan. 11.—This afternoon at 2 o'clock both branches of the legislature reconvened with the understanding that Lieutenant Governor O'Neill and Speaker Bedwell would announce their committee assignments before adjournment for the day and that the important clerkships of the house would be decided on.

Senator Charles B. Clarke of Indianapolis has been assigned to the chairmanship of the most important judiciary committee, which also is perhaps the most important committee in the house. He will head the committee on judiciary A, a place to which every lawyer in the senate aspires. It is understood the judiciary B committee chairmanship has not been decided. It is the intention of Lieutenant Governor O'Neill to place all the lawyers in the senate on the judiciary committees, but with the rules of the senate requiring eleven members on each side of those two committees, and with only fifteen lawyers in the upper house, it is imperative that senators other than lawyers go on those committees.

The Finance Committee.

It has been the understanding all along that Senator Stephen B. Fleming of Fort Wayne would be chairman of the finance committee, and that was corroborated by Mr. O'Neill. Senator Fleming has served as chairman of that committee before. It is numbered among the most important committees in the senate, corresponding to the ways and means committee of the house. It is understood that Senator Edward P. Elmsner of Seymour will be chairman of the committee on corporations. Senator John B. Faulkner of Michigan City will be chairman of the committee on prisons, and Senator Floyd Parks of Jeffersonville will head the committee on reformatories.

Senator Jacob C. Kolsem of Terre Haute will be chairman of the committee on mines. Kolsem had that chairmanship in the 1913 session. Senator O. L. Ballou of Lagrange will be chairman of the committee on drainage, an assignment which he had at the 1913 session. Senator Van Auken probably will be chairman of the committee on military affairs.

Early Start Is Promised.

It is the program of the senators to get started early and clean up as much of the routine work as possibly early in the session. A bill for a uniform bill of lading and for a uniform warehouse receipt will be introduced early. Several bills for the establishment of separate circuit courts in various parts of the state are in the making, and it is the desire, so far as the senators are concerned, to get those cleared early in the session in order that the members may give their undivided attention to legislation of a more general character.

The house has not been organized fully, as the important clerkships in that branch have not been assigned. It is the purpose of the representatives to decide on the clerkships at once, and after that is out of the way and Speaker Bedwell announces his committees they will be ready for business.

TRAGEDY OF THE HORSE SEEN IN THE AUSTRIAN WAR

Roads in Galicia, Leading Through Carpathians, Jammed With Wagon Trains.

(By William G. Shepherd, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Buda Pesth, December 1. (By Mail to New York).—It's not a gasoline power war in Austria but a horse power war, and the tragedy of the horse is seen at every turn. The great roads in Galicia, leading through the Carpathians, were literally jammed, for miles, with wagon trains, in October and early November and the steam from the backs of the thousands of faithful toiling animals, ascended like clouds in the cold, wintry air.

These wagon trains on the narrow roads are like endless chains. They can't be delayed. And woe to the horse that falls! He is coaxed to his feet again and again. Every last ounce of strength in his tired body is urged out of him and he gives his last pull with bulging eyes and then topples over.

But that isn't the last that the Austrians expect from him. At the beginning of the war the orders were that any horse which fell must be shot immediately. However, horse flesh began to grow scarce, after the first six weeks of fighting, and the armies on the Russian frontier were helpless without the hundreds of tons of supplies which must be carried to them over the mountain roads in the odd willow bodies basket wagons of the Galician farmers. So a new order was issued that no horse was to be shot unless one of his limbs were broken.

The result of this order was that when an animal fell from exhaustion and had given to his masters even the strength that was necessary to keep him on his feet, he was dragged aside, preferably into a field where there was grass, and left to work out his own fate. Usually he died, uncared for, but, now and then, a horse survived and became strong again, whereupon he would be seized by some passing soldier and put back into the daily grind.

I watched a horse "come back" this way, in a field near Przemyśl. He had fallen in the middle of a steep hill, a hill which has caused the death of many an exhausted horse. He was lying with scores of other horses in a field along-side the hill road. Evidently he had an ounce or two more of vitality than they, for he was stretched out, with his legs curled under him, while they were lying on their sides with their heads on the ground. His head was raised and I fancied that he was watching with a horse's interest, the never-ending train of wagons that was passing him. I was sorry for him, too. To get well only meant more horror for him. When I returned that way in the evening he was still lying down but there was a circle on nibbled grass about his head. The next morning he was weakly standing up, with his legs stretched wide apart, and he had gone away from the other dead and dying horses, to a lonely corner of the field. Incidentally, I noticed time and again, that there is nothing that frightens a horse so much as the body of a dead horse, and I suppose that it was sheer terror that got this fellow to his feet and helped him to struggle away to more cheerful surroundings. He was nibbling gingerly at the dry grass and now and then he raised his head and seemed to look at the mighty tide of horses and wagons and men that filled the road.

"There's a horse that will be all right, within a couple of weeks," said the Austrian officer who was with me. He's a Siberian horse. They're wonderful animals. They're the only horses in the world that will make two pulls at an immovable object. You can hitch one of them to an object, a tree or a house, that cannot possibly be moved and he will put his last ounce of strength into it. An ordinary horse would stop at that and would refuse the next pull, but not a Siberian pony. He's all sand and he'll make his second try just as bravely as he did his first. Yes indeed, that little fellow will be back in the wagon trains again within a couple of weeks."

And I suppose he was for by evening he had nibbled a huge circle of grass in his private corner of the field and when I went by that way two days later he was gone.

Even in the midst of war the horse skinner was at work. I saw them in a field near Przemyśl four gruesome looking men, covered with blood, taking the hides from the skeleton-like bodies of the horses who had given their lives in war.

Three weeks of steady work in Galicia and in the Carpathians killed the average horse. The fields were dotted with their bodies. The Austrians told me that hundreds of horses died daily in the Carpathians passes from broken lungs, broken courage or broken hearts.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Besides overthrowing all precedents by campaigning in an "off year," President Wilson's speech at Indianapolis Friday afternoon was significant for several other reasons. As he made a veiled announcement that he will be a candidate for renomination for the second term, it is to be expected that he will take the stump from time to time in the future to defend his policies. Although President Wilson made his first race for presidency of the United States upon a one term platform, he has stated enough during the last year to indicate that he is at least in a receptive mood for another term.

The President continues to hold to his pet idea that there is nothing wrong with American business except "state of mind." In other words the idle factories and thousands of unemployed workmen are only "psychological" conditions. This may be a good argument from the President's viewpoint but not from that of the workingman who is walking the streets in an effort to find something to do so that he will not become a subject of charity and so that he can give his wife and children the comforts of a contented home, the right of every American citizen. When the President says that American business is affected only by "state of mind," he probably means that it depends upon confidence but somewhat or other the confidence that brings the growth and expansion of American business and general prosperity in all lines of industry does not come with the Democratic administration. The President surely has had time to realize that his free trade policies are not satisfactory in practical application.

Another statement that was surprising was that the Republican party has not had a new idea for thirty years. Of course the address was political in its entirety and the President was expected to attack the opposition. But a declaration of this character coming as it does from a former authority on political conditions is startling. A few years ago Professor Wilson would not have thought of making such a statement and it must mean that he had difficulty in finding a place where he could attack the Republican party. If the Republican party has not advanced a new idea as the President suggests, we wonder how he classes the Sherman anti-trust law, regulation of interstate commerce, postal saving laws, free rural delivery expansion, construction of the Panama Canal, the rate bill, pure food and meat inspection laws and the scores of other measures which have resulted in the improvement of conditions of farmers and laboring men.

The Democratic party will probably renominate President Wilson for a second term. In fact, it can do nothing else if he decides that he would like to make the race. However, if the Indianapolis speech can be taken as an indication, the President is going to have a difficult time to defend his policies and convince the American workingman and the American business man that times are prosperous, that any financial depression is a mental illusion and that conditions in general were not more prosperous under Republican form of government than at the present time. The President is facing a hard proposition and at best will wage a futile fight.

SEEK THE HOME MARKET FIRST.
Certain foreign markets just now look quite alluring to our manufacturers. And some of them have cultivated that "far away" look to such an extent that they are overlooking greater possibilities at home. Just now our home markets offer exceptional advantages. Imports have been curtailed, widening the door to home products. A patriotic sentiment further encourages development along this line. This is the season when manufacturers should be planning aggressive newspaper advertising campaigns to capture the home market.

POLICE REPORTED TO HAVE UNCOVERED SEVERAL CLEWS

Identity of Persons Who Placed Bomb at Penecostal Church Not Positively Known.

Although it is reported that the police department has several clues that may reveal the identity of the persons who placed the bomb on the steps of the Penecostal church Friday night no new developments are made public. It is understood that the investigation is being continued.

According to the reports members of the congregation are of the opinion that the bomb was exploded by several persons who have been reprimanded for alleged disorder and an effort will be made to weave a web of convincing evidence about them. It is said that several facts are known that have not been given to the public. The warning which was nailed on the door may shed some light on the violation. The bomb which was made by filling a lead pipe with powder was placed on the rear steps and when it was exploded one step was blown to pieces. The bomb was concealed in a cigar box and was lighted by means of a long fuse. Little damage was done to the church building which is rented from the congregation of the Second Baptist church although some of those attending the service were badly frightened by the fire and smoke that came from under the door.

NEW BUCKEYE GOVERNOR BELIEVES IN SIMPLICITY

All Frills Were Eliminated in Ceremonies When Willis Took Over Office.

By United Press
Columbus, O., Jan. 11—Simple ceremonies marked the inauguration of Governor-elect Frank B. Willis, of Ada, O., here today. All frills were eliminated at the special request of Ohio's new chief executive. Columbus society people sought hard to retain the inaugural ball feature, but Willis took a firm stand against it as well as the custom of issuing invitations to the various ceremonies.

John Jones, farmer, from Adas county, occupied just an advantageous position at the inauguration as the best known politician in the state. "The public elected me and the public is entitled to the best at the inauguration," was the position taken by Willis.

The new governor took the oath of office at noon and then made his inaugural address from the state house steps where everybody could see and hear him. The inaugural parade followed. Then came the public reception in the rotunda of the state house ceremonies ended at 6 p. m.

Expenses of today inaugural were estimated at $300. The inauguration of Gov. Cox two years ago cost $11,000.

Farmers are also anticipating a steady advance in the price of corn and oats and will till every available foot of ground during the coming summer. Under normal conditions the price of grains depends upon the supply but with the unusual situation abroad the United States will supply part of Europe and so long as the war continues grain prices will remain at a high figure even though the crops are far above the average.

HAYS SAYS PRESIDENT'S POLICIES OFFER NO SOLUTION

Comment by Republican State Chairman on Address of Democratic National Leader.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 11—Very naturally the partisan speech delivered by President Wilson at Tomlinson Hall Friday afternoon has occasioned considerable comment in Republican circles. Taking the view that President Wilson came into Indiana as a Democratic politician, and not as President of the United States, the Republicans have not been a bit slow to point out the weak features of the President's political address. The Republicans contend that it is highly significant that the head of the Democratic party should realize that he is decidedly on the defensive at such an early date in the campaign of 1916.

The Republican view is reflected by a statement issued by Republican State Chairman Will H. Hays. Chairman Hays' comment on President Wilson's partisan speech follows:

"The President has been in Indiana and the people of the state, regardless of politics, have been pleased to welcome him. We regret of course, that it has been necessary for the President of the United States to defend the course of his administration in this manner. While the President was trying to explain the reasons for his action in certain matters more or less consequential, a million unemployed men with their families were crying for bread. Paralyzed business still awaits a ray of real hope. The policies of the President offer no solution for the extremity in which the voters of the country are really interested. Indiana Democracy has taken a rather unusual step to try to save their situation, but nothing can prevent the voters of the state and nation, at the first opportunity they have, in taking that action which will bring again to Indiana the efficient and economical government which we deserve, and to the country again the prosperity to which we are entitled."

eyes happen to fall on this. It may be of vital importance to you. It may result in opportunity for you, in preparation for you, in success for you, and then achievement, more self respect, honorable recognition and content and happiness.

It is a very simple thing, yet a very remarkable and interesting thing, that has taken place in the great United States navy—a thing which spells opportunity, preparation, success.

A Plan With a Purpose.

To begin at the beginning, an achievement is usually the result of a preconceived plan, the fruit of an idea advanced with persevering effort. Secretary Daniels' idea of the navy is for one large enough and powerful enough to make war with the United States too unpleasant in its consequences to be seriously considered by any foreign power and at the same time a navy that will receive young boys with untrained habits and little technical skill and transform them into young men trained to discipline, physically fit and possessed of a practical knowledge of technical mechanics that would enable them to bear more than their share of the work of making our nation the greatest in the world. He believes "the man is greater than the machine." It is self evident that nothing, not even the most perfectly developed apparatus, can operate without the aid of the human element.
Men must be on hand to start and stop the machinery at the proper time, to divert it this way or that, to keep its bearings well oiled and to get from it its maximum efficiency. It follows reasonably that the more skilled the men the more the machine can be made to do and that if the skill and ambition of the enlisted personnel are enhanced the efficiency of the service will be increased to that extent.

Recruiting had been desultory during the winter and spring of 1912-13,
and at a time when the enlisted force of the navy was expected to be and at that time of the year usually was at its greatest strength it was found to be nearly 5,000 short. Was the call of the navy losing its charm? Could it be that the navy did not attract American youths in numbers sufficient to man its ships? If so, that attraction must be provided. It was at this time that Secretary Daniels perfected his plans for making the navy even more attractive to young men by opening doors to promotion and for co-ordinating and expanding the existing educational facilities of the service on the axiomatic principle that knowledge is power.

We know that a bargain, to be fair, must be mutually beneficial. Both parties must be profited by it. The navy speaks and says: "I need men.
The best men only are desired. I know intelligent and ambitious men will give me better service than the indol-lent and ignorant, and in order to get the best I am not only going to give them an opportunity to succeed, but help them materially while they are making use of the opportunity."

Every Battleship a School.

Secretary Daniels planned to further educate and train Uncle Sam's bluejackets. He planned to take the unskilled recruit and make him skilled, so that he would be more efficient to the country and to himself.

And the plan has succeeded wonderfully, splendidly. The navy is today so fully recruited there is a waiting list of applicants. Only one of eight first applicants is accepted. They must be men of character, good physique and mental ability. Such men are, however, in demand to replace others as enlistments expire, and their applications are welcomed by the navy department.

An office is maintained in the postoffice building, Indianapolis, Ind., for the distribution of literature to prospective recruits and others interested in service in the navy, and information is sent promptly to all who request it.

When he enters the recruit finds the navy the "biggest university in America." He is well grounded in educational necessities. He has a chance to learn a trade. There is always room for trained men, and the most promising of unskilled recruits are chosen to specialize on the work for which they are best fitted. As in all other fields, the best man has the right of way, but each recruit, irrespective of his relative ability, is given every facility to improve and may achieve later in his enlistment the rating he was at first denied because of his deficiencies.

Young men sufficiently skilled in any number of trades, such as electricity,
machinery, carpentry, radiography,
plumbing, printing, blacksmithing, boltermaking, hospital and commissary stewarding, may qualify and from the start receive instruction designed to improve their professional efficiency,

and young men of education and clerical ability will find the yeoman's branch presenting opportunities for success. Thus under Secretary Daniels' new system the man-of-war's man is prepared. He can find his opportunity and success earlier in or out of the navy.

Doesn't this all appeal very vividly to the imagination? Think what it means! A young American, perhaps with only a cramped education, without a trade, enlists. The navy immediately starts to help him, to improve him mentally, morally and physically.
For six months he goes to school again
at a training station, a school more practical, more direct, more personal,
more satisfying than the one he possibly neglected or had no opportunity to attend a few years back. At once he becomes improved, more of a man.
Then he goes aboard a battleship. He keeps on learning, improving.

Secretary Daniels' Plan.

But let Secretary Daniels tell about his system in his own words. He says:
"By the double opportunity on shipboard of mastering a useful trade and at the same time enlarging whatever academic educational advantages they have had the navy attracts the very best of our youth to it. And that is what it wants—young men who enlist for the very love of the career, combined with whatever other practical advantages and opportunities it may offer that will protect them in case of detachment from the service by giving them the qualifications to take up a definite line of work.

Officers as Teachers.

"On each ship the school of instruction is under the general direction of the commanding officer, the executive officer having immediate charge, he,
in turn, being assisted by all commissioned officers and by such warrant and petty officers as may be necessary."

"It has become the duty of division
officers carefully to examine all men under their supervision, noting the deficiencies of each man, the amount of instruction he may have received at the training station, the branches in which further instruction is most needed, the fitness of each man for promotion, the branch for which he is best suited and the personal preferences and ambitions of each individual in order that classes may be formed to secure progress and improvement in the mental and technical training of men in every branch of the navy service."

"The instruction in the academic department is compulsory for all enlisted men who are not well grounded in the common school branches, as determined at the training stations or upon first enlistment or by an examination head. Here they are taught all that pertains to torpedoes and mines. They learn to assemble torpedoes and are taught diving and electricity as applied to ordnance mechanism.

Mines are made, set and exploded by the class. The student must learn to make the most deadly explosives from raw chemicals. Torpedoes and gun-cotton are equally interesting studies.
The student learns the intricate, watch-like mechanism of the torpedo so that he can almost assemble the thousands of its pieces in the dark. Despite the danger Uncle Sam has never had a serious accident at this school. The men are taught the danger of explosives and how to handle them safely.

At the Charleston (S. C.) machinists' school men interested in mechanics study boilers and engines from both a theoretical and practical viewpoint.
Here the young men of the navy become mechanical engineers and draftsmen.

Carpenters, plumbers, blacksmiths,
coppersmiths, electric wiring experts, painters and cooks are turned out by the scores at Norfolk.

In the hospital corps training school
the hospital apprentice learns the properties and effect of all kinds of medicinal drugs. He must also take a thorough course in anatomy and hygiene.

Each year the naval training station at Chicago turns out about 1,800 able seamen. Nine out of ten of these men enter the naval service fresh from the middle west farms. After taking the six months' course they are prepared to go aboard ships, ready for the duties of a man-o'-war's man.

Naval Academy.

Before a midshipman graduates from the Naval Academy he receives a special course in teaching in preparation for the instruction of enlisted men when he goes into active service. The secretary of the navy, through a bill passed by the last session of congress, is now empowered to appoint annually fifteen enlisted men as midshipmen to the Naval Academy. The better educational facilities at training stations and aboard ships will, with every passing year, enable ambitious and capable youths to qualify for this instruction and prepare for commissions in the navy.

Re-enlistments Increase.

Every young man who enters the navy with an earnest desire to improve himself is given that coveted opportunity. The present attractiveness of the naval service is confirmed by the increasing number of men who having served one or more terms, re-enlist for another. When a man has served his time he leaves the service much better prepared for the battle of life than when he entered. He is almost sure of a place in the world's mart of trade. The navy trained man is in demand. If the sailor re-enlists, as many do, he gets more pay and quicker advancement.

So, you see, young and patriotic American, if you have read this all through, that the United States navy today stands for opportunity, preparation, success. It offers this to the sailors in return for the superior service required and stands ready to cooperate with men of ambition and ability that they may be better able to serve it and themselves with efficiency and success.

CHAPTER VIII.

The boy from Misery rode slowly toward Hixon. At times the moon struggled out and made the shadows black along the way. At other times it was like riding in a huge caldron of pitch. When he passed into that stretch of country at whose heart Jesse Purvy dwelt he raised his voice in song. His singing was very bad, and the ballad lacked tune, but it served its purpose of saving him from the suspicion of furtiveness. Though the front of the house was black, behind its heavy shutters he knew that his coming might be noted, and night-riding at this particular spot might be misconstrued in the absence of frank warnings.

The correctness of his inference brought a brief smile to his lips when he crossed the creek that skirted the orchard and heard a stable door creak softly behind him. He was to be followed again—and watched, but he did not look back or pause to listen for the hoofbeats of his unsolicited escort. On the soft mud of the road he would hardly have heard them had he bent his ear and drawn rein. He rode at a walk, for his train would not leave until five o'clock in the morning. There was time in plenty.

It was cold and depressing as he trudged the empty streets from the livery stable to the railroad station, carrying his saddlebags over his arm. At last he heard the whistle and saw the blazing headlight, and a minute later he had pushed his way into the smoking car and dropped his saddlebags on the seat beside him. Then, for the first time, he saw and recognized his watchers. Purvy meant to have Samson shadowed as far as Lexington, and his movements from that point definitely reported. Jim Asberry and Aaron Hollis were the chosen spies. He did not speak to the two enemies who took seats across the car, but his face hardened, and his brows came together in a black scowl.

"When I gets back," he promised himself, "you'll be one of the fust folks I'll look fer, Jim Asberry, damn ye! All I hopes is that nobody else don't git ye fust. Ye blongs ter me."

The sleeping car to which he was assigned after leaving Lexington was almost empty, but he felt upon him the interested gaze of those few eyes that were turned toward his entrance. He engaged every pair with a pair very clear and steady and undrooping, until somehow each lip that had started to twist in amusement straightened, and the twinkle that rose at first glance sobered at second. Yet, for all his specious seeming of unconcern, Samson was winking to the fact that he was a scarecrow, and his sensitive pride made him cut his meals short in the dining car, where he was kept busy beating down inquisitive eyes with his defiant gaze. He resolved after some thought upon a definite policy. It was a very old policy, but to him new—and a discovery. He would change nothing in himself that involved a surrender of code or conviction. But, wherever it could be done with honor, he would concede to custom.

It was late in the second afternoon when he stepped from the train at Jersey City, to be engulfed in an unimagined roar and congestion. Here it was impossible to hold his own against the unceasing laughter of the many, and he stood for an instant glaring about like a caged tiger, while three currents of humanity separated and flowed toward the three ferry exits. Then he saw the smiling face of Lescott, and Lescott's extended hand. Even Lescott, immaculately garbed and fur-coated, seemed almost a stranger, and the boy's feeling of intimacy froze to inward constraint and diffidence. But Lescott knew nothing of that. The stoic in Samson held true, masking his emotions.

"So you came," said the New Yorker, heartily, grasping the boy's hand. "Where's your luggage? We'll just pick that up and make a dash for the ferry."

"Hear hit is," replied Samson, who still carried his saddlebags. The painter's eyes twinkled, but the mirth was so frank and friendly that the boy, instead of glaring in defiance, grinned responsively.

"Right, oh!" laughed Lescott. "I thought maybe you'd bring a trunk, but it's the wise man who travels light."

He followed Lescott out to the foot of Twenty-third street, and stepped with him into the tonneau of the painter's waiting car. Lescott lived with his family uptown, for it happened that, had his canvases possessed no value whatever, he would still have been in a position to drive his motor and follow his impulses about the world. If he did not take the boy to his home, it was because he understood that a life which must be not only full of early embarrassment, but positively revolutionary, should be approached by easy stages. Consequently the car turned down Fifth avenue, passed under the arch and drew up before a door just off Washington square, where the landscape painter had a studio suit. There were sleeping rooms and such accessories as seemed to the boy unheard-of luxury, though Lescott regarded the place as a makeshift annex to his home establishment.

"You'd better take your time in selecting permanent quarters," was his careless fashion of explaining to Samson. "It's just as well not to hurry. You are to stay here with me, as long as you will."

"I'm obleeged ter ye," replied the boy, to whose training in open-dressed hospitality the invitation seemed only natural. The evening meal was brought in from a neighboring hotel, and the two men dined before an open fire, Samson eating in mountain silence, while his host chatted and asked questions.

"Samson," suggested the painter, when the dinner things had been carried out and they were alone, "you are here for two purposes: First, to study painting; second, to educate and equip yourself for coming conditions. It's going to take work, more work, and then some more work."

"I ain't skeered of work," "I believe that. Also, you must keep out of trouble. You've got to ride your fighting instinct with a strong curb."

"I don't 'low to let nobody run over me." The statement was not argumentative; only an announcement of a principle which was not subject to modification.

"All right, but until you learn the ropes let me advise you." The boy gazed into the fire for a few moments of silence.

"I gives ye my hand on that," he promised.

At eleven o'clock the painter, having shown his guest over the premises, said good-night and went uptown to his own house. Samson lay a long while awake, with many disquieting reflections.

Meanwhile Lescott, letting himself into a house overlooking the park, was hailed by a chorus of voices from the dining room. He turned and went in to join a gay group just back from the opera. As he thoughtfully mixed himself a highball, they bombarded him with questions.

"Why didn't you bring your barbarian with you?" demanded a dark-eyed girl, who looked very much as Lescott himself might have looked had he been a girl—and very young and lovely. Now she flashed on him an affectionate smile, and added: "We have been waiting to see him. Must we go to bed disappointed?"

George stood looking down on them, and tinkled the ice in his glass.

"He wasn't brought on for purposes of exhibition, Drennie," he smiled. "I was afraid if he came in here in the fashion of his arrival—carrying his saddlebags—you ultracivilized folk might have laughed."

"No! Now, actually with saddlebags?" echoed a young fellow with a likable face which was for the moment incredulously amused. "That goes Dick Whittington one better. You do make some rare discoveries, George. We celebrate you."

"Thanks, Horton," commented the painter, dryly. "When you New Yorkers have learned what these barbarians already know, the control of your oversensitized risibles and a courtesy deeper than your shirt-fronts—maybe I'll let you have a look. Meantime I'm much too fond of all of you to risk letting you laugh at my barbarian."

Several months were spent laboring with charcoal and paper over plaster casts in Lescott's studio, and Lescott himself played instructor. When the skylight darkened with the coming of evening, the boy whose mountain nature cried out for exercise went for long tramps that carried him over many miles of city pavements, and after that, when the gas was lit, he turned, still insatiably hungry, to volumes of history, and algebra, and facts.

A sloop-rigged boat with a crew of two was dancing before a brisk breeze through blue Bermuda water. Off to the right Hamilton rose sheer and colorful from the bay. At the tiller sat the white-clad figure of Adrienne Lescott. Puffs of wind that whipped the tautly bellying sheets lashed her dark hair about her face. Her lips, vividly red like poppy petals, were just now curved into an amused smile, which made them even more than ordinarily kissable and tantalizing. Her companion was neglecting his nominal duty of tending the sheet to watch her.

"Wilfred," she teased, "your contrast is quite startling—and, in a way, effective. From head to foot you are spotless white—but your scowl is absolutely the blackest black that our eyes endure." And she added, in an injured voice, "I'm sure I've been very nice to you."

"I have not yet begun to scowl," he assured her, and proceeded to show what superlatives of saturnine expression he held in reserve. "See here, Drennie, I know perfectly well that I'm a sheer imbecile to reveal the fact that you've made me mad. It pleases you too perfectly. It makes you happen that is good for you, but—"

"It's a terrible thing to make me happy, isn't it?" she inquired, sweetly. "Drennie, you have held me off since we were children. I believe I first announced my intention of marrying you when you were twelve. That intention remains unaltered. More: It is unalterable and inevitable. My reasons for wanting to needn't be rehearsed. It would take too long. I regard you as possessed of an alert and remarkable mind—one worthy of companionship with my own." Despite the frivolous badinage of his words and the humorous smile of his lips, his eyes hinted at an underlying intensity. "With no desire to flatter or spoil you, I find your personal aspect pleasing enough to satisfy me. And then, while a man should avoid emotionalism, I am in love with you." He moved over to a place in the sternsheets, and his face became intensely earnest. He dropped his hand over hers as it lay on the tiller shaft. "God knows, dear," he exclaimed, "how much I love you!"

Her eyes, after holding his for a moment, fell to the hand which still imprisoned her own. She shook her head, not in anger, but with a manner of gentle denial, until he released her fingers and stepped back.

"You are a dear, Wilfred," she comforted, "and I couldn't manage to get on without you, but you aren't marriageable—at least, not yet."

"Why not?" he asked. "In the first place, you are one of those men whose fortunes are listed in the top schedule—the swollen fortunes. Socialists would put you in the predatory class."

"Drennie," he groaned, "it's not my fault that I'm rich. It was wished on me. If you are serious, I'm willing to become poor as Job's turkey. Show me the way to strip myself, and I'll stand shortly before you begging alms."

"To what end?" she questioned. "Poverty would be quite inconvenient. I shouldn't care for it. But hasn't it ever occurred to you that the man who wears the strongest and brightest mail, and who by his own confession is possessed of an alert brain, ought occasionally to be seen in the lists?"

"In short, your charge is that I am a shirker—and, since it's the same thing, a coward?"

Adrienne did not at once answer him, but she straightened out for an uninterrupted run before the wind, and by the tiny moss-green flecks, which moments of great seriousness

"You Are a Dear, Wilfred?"

brought to the depths of her eyes, he knew that she meant to speak the unveiled truth.

"Besides your own holdings in a lot of railways and things, you handle your mother's and sisters' property, don't you?"

He nodded. "In a fashion, I do. I sign the necessary papers when the lawyers call me up and ask me to come downtown."

"You are a director in the Metropole Trust company?"

"Guilty."

"In the Consolidated Seacoast?"

"I believe so."

"With your friends, who are also shareholders, you could assume control of the Morning Intelligence, couldn't you?"

"I guess I could assume control, but what would I do with it?"

"Do you know the reputation of that newspaper?"

"I guess it's all right. It's conservative and newsy. I read it every morning when I'm in town. It fits in very nicely between the grapefruit and the bacon and eggs."

"It is, also, powerful," she added, "and is said to be absolutely servile to corporate interests."

"Drennie, you talk like an anarchist. You are rich yourself, you know."

"And against each of those other concerns various charges have been made."

"Well, what do want me to do?"

"It's not what I want you to do," she informed me; "it's what I'd like to see you want to do."

"Name it! I'll want to do it forthwith."

"I think when you are one of a handful of the richest men in New York; when, for instance, you could dictate the policy of a great newspaper, yet know it only as the course that follows your grapefruit, you are a shirker and a drone, and are not playing the game." Her hand tightened on the tiller. "I think if I were a man riding on to the polo field I'd either try like the devil to drive the ball down between the posts, or I'd come inside and take off my boots and colors. I wouldn't hover in a ladylike futility around the edge of the scrimmage."

She knew that to Horton, who played polo like a fiend incarnate, the figure would be effective, and she whipped out her words with something very close to scorn.

"There's my hand on it, Drennie," he said. "We start back to New York tomorrow, don't we? Well, when I get there I put on overalls and go to work. When I propose next I'll have something to show."

ALARMING REPORT
FROM WASHINGTONImportance of Meat Inspection Emphasized.

Washington, Jan. 11.—Of the meat consumed in this country only 5 per cent is derived from absolutely healthy animals, according to official information obtained from the department of agriculture.

If all but this 5 per cent were condemned as unfit for human consumption, say experts of the bureau of animal industry, flesh food would become as rare and as high priced as humming birds' tongues.

The need of more adequate inspection by state agencies of meat for local consumption which is not inspected is disclosed by information obtained by the government, according to officials. Only about 60 per cent of the country's meat supply is inspected by the federal government.

PRESIDENT MISUNDERSTOOD

This Is View His Son-in-Law Takes of Recent Utterance.

Washington, Jan. 11.—A statement made in Chicago by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo that he did not believe President Wilson in his Indianapolis speech intended to indicate that he is going to be a candidate for a second term, has had the effect of directing a great deal of attention to Mr. McAdoo.

The tone of the statement was so confident that it has raised a question in the minds of some officials as to whether Mr. McAdoo had some "inside" information as to the president's political plans. Mr. McAdoo is the first important official to speak for publication who has expressed the opinion that the president's utterances at Indianapolis regarding the possibility that the people of the country might soon have opportunity to pass on the deeds of this administration ought not to be regarded as foreshadowing a second term candidacy.

It is non-partisan and the movement is to be nation wide.

New York, Jan. 11.—John Pleacia, a baker, is locked up charged with having shot and killed his six-year-old daughter. The little girl threw her arms about her mother's neck and the bullet from Pleacia's revolver struck her behind the ear.

Russians Fail to Displace Enemy.

Vienna, Jan. 11.—An official communication says: The general situation is without change. South of the Vistula the Russians bombarded our positions, but without result. North of the Vistula at some points there have been heavy artillery battles. An attempt by the enemy to cross the Nida with weak forces failed. The situation in the Carpathians is quiet. Two reconnoitering detachments of the enemy in Bukovina were destroyed by machine gun fire.

Fiery Blood

The Sources of Disease are Cleaned and Blood
Purified

Those who have used S. S. S. marvel at the way it checks blood diseases. See a man today with his skin all broken out; see him again in a week or two after using S. S. S. and he is a wonder to behold, all cleared up, skin healthy, eyes bright, a big smile replaces the droop. What is S. S. S. that can accomplish such wonderful results? First of all it is a natural medicine. Like milk, eggs and other foods that can not be imitated, S. S. S. owes it to Nature for its power to overcome disease just as food prevents enervation. S. S. S. is not a combination of prescription drugs. It is a preparation direct from medicinal plants that retains all the virile potency of what we need, what we must have in the blood to counteract those destructive tendencies that assail us throughout life. If it were not for our natural secretions to sustain us, aided by such known helps as S. S. S. there would be small chance of any of us surviving childhood.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today from any druggist but be careful to avoid the substitutes peddled off on the unwary. S. S. The KITCHEN
CUPBOARD

WHEN YOU SERVE BACON.

BREAKFAST MENU.
White Grapes. Cereal.
Fried Eggs With Bacon.
Toast. Coffee.

BACON would be more popular were it served in a greater variety of ways. It may be cooked alone or combined with other foods with success.

Cooked With Eggs.

Fried Eggs With Bacon.—Take four eggs, four slices of bacon, four sprigs of parsley. Put the bacon in a hot pan, keep turning all the time and remove the drippings. When the bacon is crisp remove from pan and put in the eggs, reducing the heat. The eggs must fry slowly. When done on one side or both sides put on hot platter. Garnish with bacon and parsley.

A Tempting Dish.

Bacon and Egg Balls.—Have some hot fat in a deep pan. The temperature should be that necessary for fritters. Stir it until it whirls around quickly. Now break an egg into this miniature whirlpool and keep the fritter turning with the stick till the egg is of the consistency of a poached one and quite round; then lift it out and lay it in a hot dish. Let the dish lean toward the fire to keep the eggs hot. Do as many more as you require in the same way. They will keep hot and soft in the dish before the fire for quite half an hour. Serve either on a square of fried bacon placed on a fried croquette or on a dish with little curls of fried bacon between.

Delicious With Cream.

Creamed Bacon on Toast.—Take half a pound of thinly sliced bacon, a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful of flour, four pieces of toast, four sprigs of parsley. Put the bacon in a hot frying pan and fry until crisp. Drain off nearly all the drippings, sprinkle with flour and mix. Then add the cold milk slowly. Boil three minutes slowly. Stir quite often. Serve on toast garnished with parsley.

Served With Sauce.

Fried Bacon With Cream Sauce.—Slice bacon thin and put into hot frying pan, keep turning until brown, but not hard. Remove, put on slices of toast. Put a tablespoonful of flour into the pan with bacon fat, mix until smooth, put over fire. Add a cupful of cold milk and boil two minutes, adding a little pepper and salt. Stir until smooth and creamy. Pour over the bacon and garnish with a little chopped parsley.

Old College Ways.
Students at St. Andrews university

two centuries ago paid nothing for their rooms, but £3.10s. per quarter enabled them to dine at the high table. For £5.11s. 1d. poorer men could get through the whole session—just six months. Breakfast was served at 7 a. m. and consisted of an oatmeal loaf and half a pint of beer. For supper each had half a twopenny loaf and a pint of beer. At the high table poultry, broth and beef were served and at the second a plentiful supply of broth and beef. Beer there was in abundance, and the colleges in those days had their brew house, a perquisite of the porter, who was permitted to sell ale to the students.

If you want to cause her to increase the volume of her correspondence in your direction, send her a box of Cranes Linen Lawn writing paper. OREGON'S GOVERNMENT STARTS UP AGAIN TODAY

Members of Legislature and Supreme Court Witness Inaugural Exercises.

By United Press
Salem, Ore., Jan. 11—With simple ceremonies, Dr. James Withycombe, Republican, of Cornwallis, was inaugurated governor of Oregon to succeed Oswald West, Democrat, this afternoon.

The hall of representatives was that scene of the inauguration. The members of the legislature, and state supreme court, besides friends of the outgoing and incoming chief executives were in attendance.

The chief justice of the supreme court administered the oath of office. The retiring governor delivered a short address, which consisted mainly of a review of the achievements of his administration.

The speaker of the house then announced the election, and introduced Dr. Withycombe, who delivered his inaugural address, the keynote of which was economy without parsimony.

The state legislature then convened. The first woman ever elected to the Oregon legislature, Miss Marion B. Thowne, a democrat of Jackson county, was in her seat on the house side.

The legislature was decidedly republican in complexion. The house consists of 56 republicans and four democrats, the senate twenty-eight republicans and two democrats.

One of the principal laws to be passed by the legislature this session will be one providing penalties for the violation of state-wide prohibition, which goes into effect January 1, 1915.

The people at the election last November voted to adopt prohibition, but failed to specify what punishment should be meted out to violators.

Woman's World

Charming Wife of the New Ambassador to France.

MRS. WILLIAM G. SHARP.

As wife of the American representative in France Mrs. Myron T. Herick, endeared herself to the French by her kindness to the wounded and the needy. Her husband has been succeeded as ambassador by Mr. William Graves Sharp of Ohio, whose wife, so far as the Parisians are concerned, is an unknown quantity.

However, Mrs. Sharp is well known in Washington, where her husband spent a number of years as a member of congress. She is a charming and cultured woman, a member of many of the leading women's clubs in her home town of Elyria, O., progressive in her ideas and with a decided interest in art and science.

Mrs. Sharp was before her marriage Miss Hallie Clough. She is descended from a brother of Nathan Hale and is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. As an artist she won praise before she married. Her family has engrossed her time to the exclusion of art since then. She is the mother of five children, all of them of the school age. She has put these into good schools to continue their studies while she is abroad. Her eldest daughter, who is in Oberlin college, has talent as a musician.

Regrets For Afternoon Tea.
If unable to accept an invitation for afternoon tea your visiting card, mailed to arrive on the day of the tea or sent by a messenger or some friend who attends, is all the regrets required for an afternoon tea. If the hostess happens to be a very dear friend who would be expecting you, you could send a personal note explaining why you could not be present, and you could tell her how sorry you were to miss the tea.

BEAUTY DON'TS.

Don't wash the face with soap and water before going out in the cold.
Don't fail to dry the hands thoroughly and rub in some softening lotion every time the hands are bathed.
Don't wear tight shoes, as they impede the circulation and make the feet cold.
Don't wear a veil more than two or three times without washing it.
Don't cut finger nails; file them.
Don't go out for at least two hours after a hot bath.
Don't put your feet very near the heat when very cold.
